CRITICS CORNER

Love and Anguish

By Charlie Epstein

Richard Strauss composed the music for the opera Ariadne Auf Naxos with the libretto by Hugo von Hofmannsthal. This opera, presented at Clowes Hall, was in two acts distinctly different from each other.

The first act was a backstage look at an opera to be presented in the second act. The first act reminded one of the very humorous play Noises Off, where backstage antics are revealed. Only, in this opera, backstage was not as funny. There were members of the opera along with the composer plus a comedic company. The composer was beset with problems about whether to go first or second for the evening's entertainment. The benefactor ruled that both productions should be done simultaneously thus making the prospect for the second act hilarious.

This anticipated comedy did not happen though. The second act opera also entitled "Ariadne Auf Naxos" was a somber affair. The comedy troupe did have a creative scene though, but not simultaneously with the opera, which would have been a lot of fun.

The star of the first act was Jan Dutton in the pants role of the composer. Her voice was glorious. The others made a token appearance in the first act, such as Angela Brown as the Prima Donna and Rachele Gilmore as a member of the comedy troupe. They both reappeared in the second act with huge arias, Brown whose phrasing was excellent as the title role of Princess Ariadne and Gilmore as the energetic Zerbinetta whose singing was enthusiastic.

It was obvious that director Joachim Schamberger had plenty of problems trying to make the performance interesting. The libretto had very little action making for a static and boring production. However, Schamberger did succeed occasionally, especially with the comedy troupe in the second act. The elaborate costuming helped.

Next up for the Indianapolis opera is the melodic La Boheme and then the joyous Gilbert and Sullivan's The Mikado.

Yoo-Hoo, Mrs. Goldberg

By Charlie Epstein

Before Oprah, Martha, Rachel Ray, and even Lucy, there was Gertrude Berg. She was a media trailblazer who became the first lady of radio and then TV. In her time she was polled as the second most respected woman in America after Eleanor Roosevelt. Gertrude Berg is "truly the most famous woman in America you've never heard of."

In case you did not know it, Gertrude Berg created Molly Goldberg, first on radio and then on TV in the 1930s and 40s. She wrote and starred in the series The Goldbergs. Actually she wrote over 12 thousand scripts for the shows. She also starred on Broadway in The Majority of One with Sir Cedric Hardwicke. Obviously because of her terrific popularity, she commanded a huge salary.

The entertaining movie Yoo-Hoo, Mrs. Goldberg is a wonderful history of Gertrude Berg. Many people, including her relatives, in this superb movie reminisce about her. The Goldbergs became television's very first character-driven domestic sitcom. Molly combined family values, social commentary and lots of humor to win the hearts of America. She also received the very first Emmy for a female in television.

Ruth Bader Ginsberg said, "She was no shrinking violet. We all listened to Molly Goldberg on the radio."

Coincidentally I luckily was cast as Sammy Goldberg, her son, on the TV show. For six months I met the cast but never got paid. Sammy was in the U.S. Army at the time, and the Goldberg's received two letters from him. Therefore I was never seen. Such went my television debut.

In Indianapolis you can see this film at the Keystone Landmark Theatre.

Holy Land Hardball, film screening

Sat., Nov. 21, 7 p.m., $5 / $3 member. Baseball in Israel? Sounds incredulous and despite the absurdity of the idea, it was almost a reality. This award-winning film about the attempt to introduce America's favorite pastime in the Middle East is as much a story about beleaguered league as it is about following one's personal dream.
